Garrattsville and Its People in the Long Ago.

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRONICLE. Number 1.

One of the sweetest memories of childhood is of two aged people who lived near the three corners above Garrattsville, on what is now known as the Edmonds place. Here were Ira Cone and his wife Lydia Hays Cone, some familiarly known as Uncle Ira and Aunt Lydia Cone. Both were members of the society of Friends.

He was a man of strict integrity and true moral worth. A story was told of him that proved he was shrewd in his dealings with others. He had sold a big load of oats and on delivering them the buyer had refused to take them at the old man's measure. To measure them again he proposed turning them from the bags into the half bushel.

"No thee won't," the old man said. "Thee can measure them again if thee chooses, but thee will turn them all down on the floor first, and measure them from there." As the story was told the oats were taken at the old gentleman's measure.

The old lady was beloved by all who knew her. It was said she was free hearted to a fault. No one who came there went away hungry, and the poor always carried away tokens of her bounty, if the master were not at home. He was generous to the needy, but for the shiftless hangers on he had no pity.

Well remembered in his large stock of cattle, his horses and oxen, and his granaries overfull of wheat, corn and other grain in proportion.

It was said the old lady had been a beauty and a looker in her younger days. She was fine looking in her later years. A story was told of her that proved she had courage and ability to do in a crisis what not many women of this day would dare attempt.

Her husband, having to leave home, asked her to feed the fattening cow, telling her he had left the pumpkin or roots of some kind in the pen. Not long after feeding the cow she saw it was badly choked. No one was within call and she saw the creature must die, so she cut its throat. It could not save the cow's life she could at least save her winter's beef.

They had two sons, Lyman and Naaman. A little daughter, Lina, had died in babyhood. The sons, as they grew to manhood, became members of the society of Friends.

In 1829 a Friends meeting house was built a little east of their home, fronting the cross road, on some land the old gentleman had given for that purpose, so long as the house should be used as a place of worship. In those old days quite a few gathered there every "First Day" though there was not always a Smiles.

A man's smile at best is a grin idealized, but a woman's smile includes every shade of emotion of which she is capable. —Times-Union.

Shocked the Clergyman.

A Maine clergyman, living at the hotel in his town, ordered a typewriter and had it sent to his rooms. It came when the clergyman was out, and the proprietor took charge of it. When the minister returned the proprietor led him behind the desk and whispered: "That case of yours is on the ice, parson. I guess it will be all right by dinner time."

APRIL MAGAZINES.

The Ladies' World for April suggests the springtime, from the very pretty cover to the last word on the last page. The stories you sense the growing things, and in the fashion departments you see what is to be worn, while household matters chiefly concern what is best to eat and why a change of diet is desirable at this season. There are several notable special articles, such as The Call of the City, in which Anna Steere (Richardson) tells what the city offers to young girls in the way of employment and remuneration; The Cry of the Mountain Woman, by Charles V. Tevis—the "cry" being for education for her children; Receiving the Small Visitor, by L. Josephine Brigrart; Studies in Married Life by Louise D. Mitchell; Earning by Saving, by Laura A. Smith.—New York; 50 cents a year.

Kathleen Norris, who became famous as the author of "Mother," begins a new serial novel in the April Woman's Home Companion. It is a love story laid in California. Other fiction is contributed by Mary Stewart Cutting, Carolyn Wells, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman and Mary Hastings Brady. The regular household, fashion and home decoration departments are filled with new, interesting facts and suggestions. A notable contribution to the fashion department is entitled "A Day in New York With Miss Gould," in which Grace Margaret Gould, the well-known fashion editor of the Companion, takes the reader to see the new fashions at a smart modiste's, then to Fifth Avenue, where at afternoon tea, the newest and latest gowns are to be seen, and in the evening to a theater, where more of the latest fashions in this line are exhibited.—New York; $1.50 a year.

Mrs. Chas. Lawrence cordially invites the ladies of this vicinity to attend the Opening of Spring Millinery at her parlors in Morris on Wednesday and Thursday March 27 and 28.
