BORST MURDER TRIAL.

Cecil Borst of Worcester was tried at Cooperstown last week before Judge Kellogg, for the killing of Maribeu Smith at Worcester in a drunken row last winter. The jurors were: Charles Roseboom, Westford; W. E. Bennett, Burlington; Kendrick Matteson, Pittsfield; Floyd Cooper, Middlefield; William Curtis, Gilbertsville; George Elliott, Morris, Wm. Hinds, Cooperstown; Hoses Wickie, Middlefield, Smith Gregory, New Lisbon, Dorr Parker, Edmeston; W. VanDeusen Middlefield Center; Myron Ames, Richfield.

The case was given to the jury Friday morning, and after deliberation of eight hours a verdict was returned of manslaughter in the first degree, and Borst was sentenced by Judge Kellogg to not more than ten years nor less than five at hard labor in Auburn prison.
THE TITANIC DISASTER.

Not as a matter of news but simply one of record may weekly local papers speak of the terrible affair of the sinking of the biggest ocean liner ever afloat, the Titanic, on the night of Sunday, April 15th. Probably no ship sailing from Europe ever carried at one time so many prominent representatives of the wealth of the world nor more leading people in other walks of life; of the former two, John Jacob Astor and Benjamin Guggenheim, represented $250,000,000, and others brought it up to half a billion, of the other class may be mentioned Isidor Straus, the New York merchant, F. D. Millet, the artist, William T. Stead, the London journalist and author; William Roebing, the contracting engineer; Major Butt, military secretary to President Taft; and Rev. Holden of London, the famous Northfield preacher.

In 2 1/2 hours after the big ship struck the iceberg she went down. In the meantime the life boats had been lowered and in them all the women and children, some 868 had been placed, and were afterward picked up by the steamship Carpathia, which arrived on the scene Monday morning, in answer to the Titanic's wireless call for help, on the instant of the collision. The number of the lost is about 1,600.
The financial loss is enormous. The ship was valued at $10,000,000 and this was her first voyage. Her cargo including diamonds and luggage of passengers, brings the total up to more than $15,000,000; to which may be added nearly 4,000 sacks of mail, much of it very valuable. Insurance companies are hit many millions. The story of the disaster forms an epoch in the history of the world's catastrophes and will be an event forever remembered.

Garrattville and Its People in the Long Ago.

Charles Hoag came to the village, it is believed, in the early forties. He was a harness maker and had no family. He was quite a ladies' man, and yet, he did not seem to have any favorites among them. The Simeon Bundy had sold his farm here and moved nearer to the center of the town. Later John Hoag, a brother of Charles Hoag, came and lived in the house vacated by Bundy, and Charles had a home with him. After a few years, for some reason, not liking it here, he moved to his father's, and Moses J. Hoag, who had been living there, came to the village and bought quite a piece of land above the red house and lying back on the hillside. The family lived in the red house while a new one was being built for them. He and his wife were members of the society of Friends. She was a most excellent woman, and well might it have been said of her:

"None knew her but to love her, None named her but to praise."
Often in later years as we called at her home her kindly words of greeting seemed like a benediction. Though she lived many years in Garrattville it seemed all too soon when the death angel beckoned her away. Dear Aunt Abigail.

Some time during the years Charles Hoag went to Washington by the way of Philadelphia. It was said he was to spend a few days at the latter place making arrangements for his marriage on his return from Washington. He came back there, had a fever and died, so Garrattville knew him no more.
Another brother, Ezra, came later to the village. He and his wife were members of the Methodist church and quite effective workers there. He was a stirring business man and his wife had a millinery store here for many years. They were kindly people and good neighbors. Edward Hoag, a nephew of the older Hoags, who died not long since, leaves but one of the name now in Garrattville.

Not far from the village but hidden from it by the surrounding hills, was the home for many years of the Hume family. The first remembered in years ago was an old man, John Hume, more often called "Uncle Johnnie" Hume. He was the father of Robert B. Hume, who, after the old man's death, moved from a hill farm a few miles away and lived in a part of the house with his mother. There his family grew to manhood and womanhood, respected by all who knew them.

It is believed the United Presbyterian church owes more to the Humes for its upbuilding than to any other family. For many years Robert B. Hume and his wife lived and labored together, and most fitting it seemed that in their death they were not long separated. Their funerals were as one, and together they
