Questions fly while firemen battle blaze at stabbing site

Morning of terror for many

ACT. Storms were also severe when he left his home in Morris to answer an emergency call to the Littleton fire in Morris yesterday.

Many volunteers helped — firefighters, ambulance drivers, paid fire department drivers from Oneonta, and 4119 troopers and FBI men.

The morning was not without its mystery. Many questions went unanswered as flames poured tons of water on a blazing barn and its incendiary-like halos of heat.

It was hot, it was grimy, and most of the firemen believed that Dwight Littleton's body was somewhere in that region.

The search for the body was hampered and Troop went down where drafts occurred. And they poured water and more water.
