

PIANOS FOR THE SCHOOLS
The Times Offers Two Most Prize Instruments to be Voted For.

The Times piano contest excited so much interest among the pupils and friends of the public schools, and the award of the prizes has been received with such general satisfaction, that it has been decided to give another opportunity to the schools that were outvoted to win a similar prize.

The Times will present a fine piano to that one of the public schools of Philadelphia receiving the greatest number of votes, and also a second prize piano to the school receiving the second highest vote, between this date and the last day of January, 1896. Each vote must be marked upon a coupon cut from The Times, like this:

OCTOBER 24

The TIMES

PIANO CONTEST

NAME OF SCHOOL _____

Section _____

Cut out this coupon, write upon it the name of the school voted for and enclose in an envelope addressed thus:

The TIMES

PHILADELPHIA

Piano Contest.

Each coupon will count as one vote, but one person may send in any number of coupons, and any number of coupons may be enclosed in one envelope. But no coupon will be counted that is received more than five days after the date printed upon it. The contest will close upon the last day of January.

Every school ought to be furnished with a piano, and this offer will enable two schools to secure this essential part of their equipment at only the cost of a little organized effort on the part of the teachers and pupils and their parents and friends. The Times desires both to encourage the cultivation of music in the public schools and to stimulate the zeal of the pupils, as well as the general interest in education. The offer of two prizes will give every school a fair chance to gain one of them, and it is likely that this contest will prove even more exciting than the first, in which no less than 427,181 votes were cast by readers of The Times.

How the contest worked.

Clipped By:

bob_thomas_wk
Fri, Nov 6, 2020