PUTS LITTLE CREDENCE IN O'DONNELL'S STORY

Prosecutor Sovel Doesn't Take Much Stock in Tale of Prisoner That He Saw James Purdy and Robert Whitlaw Murdered in Tallow House at Gloucester.

Prosecutor Sovel said today that he did not place much credence in the story told by John O'Donnell on Saturday night of the effect that he witnessed the double murder at the Gloucester house, Gloucester, when James Purdy and Robert Whitlaw were murdered May 11, 1909.

The story and the details were given to the press by the Gloucester man, who said he was in the house at the time of the murder and that he saw the bodies of the two men lying on the floor of the parlor and that he saw the bodies of the two men lying on the floor of the parlor and that he saw the bodies of the two men lying on the floor of the parlor.

O'Donnell says that the first time he saw the bodies of the two men was when he was in the house at the time of the murder and that he saw the bodies of the two men lying on the floor of the parlor and that he saw the bodies of the two men lying on the floor of the parlor.

He says that he saw the bodies of the two men lying on the floor of the parlor and that he saw the bodies of the two men lying on the floor of the parlor.
